

BALLINA

It is agreeably situated on the banks of the river Moy, in the county of Mayo, which is joined to Sligo by a bridge of sixteen arches. It is 121 miles north west of Dublin, 16 north of Castlebar, and 24 north by east of Westport. The town which is tolerably well built, is progressively improving, and has a very considerable salmon fishery. Ballina contains a small church, to which a very neat spire has lately been added; and an extensive brewery, the property of John Livingston, Esq. Not far from the town are the ruins of Roserick or Rosserick Abbey, built by one of the family of the Joices, which was of much consequence in England and Ireland in the 14th century. On the 26th of August, 1798, this town was seized by the French immediately after landing at Killala, where the rebels committed many atrocities, until the surrender of the French at Ballynamuck, when it was abandoned by the deluded multitude, who were defeated and dispersed at the battle of Killala.

Ballina, although a considerable distance from the bay of Killala, possesses a smart trade; its exports are chiefly grain. A new quay was lately erected about a mile down the river, and a line of canal is forming from this quay, which will communicate with the town, and, in all probability, much increase the trade and convenience of the merchants. Many of the inhabitants are respectable and wealthy, and have raised within themselves a company of yeomanry, consisting of 20 mounted and 50 dismounted, under the command of Colonel Cuff. Annual sessions are held here in July, and weekly courts for the recovery of wages, &c. &c. There is a good market on Monday, for corn and horses; it is one of the most important in the county. Fairs are held on the 12th of May, the 3rd and 12th of June, the 12th of August, and the 13th of December.—The population is rated at 7000.

POST OFFICE, Knoxe's-street. The Dublin mail arrives at a quarter past ten in the evening, from Colonee, and is despatched at three every morning. Office hours from seven in the morning till eleven at night.

BALLINAMORE

It is a market and post town situated on the banks of a small river in the county of Leitrim, 73 miles north west of Dublin, 9 north of Mohill, 8 from Cloon, 7 south west of Cashearrigan, 7 from Carrigallen, and 9 south west of Ballyconnel. A considerable corn-mill has lately been erected here by Mr. Charles Sharpley, and there are also two extensive tan-yards, which employ many of the inhabitants. The church is a small, but neat edifice, possessing neither spire nor steeple; and the Catholic chapel is a spacious stone building. Here is a sessions house, where civil suits only are decided twice a year. The market, which is held on Tuesday, is remarkably well supplied. Its two fairs are on the 12th of May and the 12th of November.—The population is about 800.

POST OFFICE.—Post Master, Mr. Charles Hamilton. The Dublin mail arrives at half-past eleven in the morning, and is despatched at half-past one in the afternoon. The Killyshandra mail arrives and departs with the Dublin mail. Letters for England and Scotland go by the Dublin mail.
