MALLOW,

IN the county of Cork, is distant one hundred and twenty-six miles south-west of Dublin, and sixteen north-by-west of Cork. It is a flourishing town, pleasantly situated on the Blackwater, over which there is an excellent stone bridge, which joins it to the village of Ballydaheen. Mallow formerly boasted of two noble castles, which were built by the Earl of Desmond, and destroyed in the rebellion of 1641; the remains of one of them cannot fail to attract the attention of the traveller. The modern structures consist of a handsome church, and a new market house, with convenient buildings adjoining, erected by the present proprietor; here are also chapels for Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Calvinists and Independants. Contiguous to the town is a spring of moderately tepid water, bursting from a limestone rock; its medicinal qualities attract a numerous assemblage of fashionable society, for whose convenience commodious baths are about to be erected; it was discovered in the year 1724, and in quality assimilates to the hot water of Bristol—its temperature is 68½. Mallow since the year 1803, has retained one member to the imperial parliament, elected by a seneschal and freeholders; it formerly returned two, as appears from a charter granted by James I. making Mallow a corporation to be governed by a provost and twelve burgesses, having the power of returning two members. Since the peace, the trade of this town has wonderfully increased. The manor of Mallow was a distinct seignory, which formerly belonged to the Earl of Desmond, and, upon his attainder, was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Sir John Norris, who settled the crown of Portugal on the present royal house of Braganza, & was Lord President of Munster. Sir John Jephson, knt. ancestor of the present proprietor, Charles Denham Orlando Jephson, marrying the heiress of Sir John Norris, became possessed of this estate, & obtained new letters patent for the same. The market days are Tuesday and Saturday, and fairs are held on the 1st of January, the Monday before Shrove Tuesday, the 11th of May, the 25th of July, and the 28th of October. The population, according to the last returns, was, including the Manor and the village of Ballydaheen, 8077.
