DONAGHADEE,

IN the county of Down, is a neat, clean, and highly respectable seaport town, distant from Dublin ninety-five miles, and from Belfast fifteen. It is noted as being the nearest port to Scotland, from which it is only twenty-four miles distant, and between which and this kingdom a communication is kept up by means of his majesty's packets, which sail to and from Portpatrick daily; it is supposed that upwards of 70,000 persons pass and repass annually. The appearance of this place will be greatly improved, and infinite advantage derived, from the formation of a new harbour, which is now being carried into effect upon a very extensive and magnificent scale; a tolerably correct idea of which may be formed from the original estimate for the north and south piers alone, amounting to 145,000*l.* besides an annual parliamentary grant of 15,000*l.* The first stone of the harbour was laid by the Marquis of Downshire, on the first of August, 1821, on which occasion the commissioners forming the board presented to his lordship an elegant trowel, on one side of which was engraved a beautiful representation of the harbour in its finished state, on the other an appropriate inscription. The Harbour, when finished, will form an artificial basin, containing upwards of seven acres; the north and south piers are to be parallel to each other, extending in a right line 450 feet, thence there are to be three turns or cants of 100 feet each, leaving an opening for the entry of shipping of 150 wide. The depth of water at low water in spring tides, on the land side, is from 12 to 14 feet, it then deepens gradually toward the extreme end of the respective piers, where there is 16 feet at low water; the rise of the tide at spring tides is from 13 to 16 feet according to the circumstances of wind and weather. The probable period required for the completion of the harbour is seven years. At the northern end of the town is a Danish rath of mount of great height, from whose summit there is a beautiful prospect of the town and surrounding country; with a distant view of the Scotch coast, & the Orkney Isles. That part of the town next the shore is built in the form of a crescent, and the extreme whiteness of the houses gives it a very pleasing appearance. As a bathing place Donaghadee may boast of as many advantages as any other town, having a fine beach, and good lodging houses, in pleasant and healthy situations; the air is salubrious, provision cheap, and the society agreeable. A bathing house is now erecting, and in a state of forwardness; it will possess every convenience of hot and cold baths, and be elegantly fitted up for the comfort of its visitors. There are many good and elegant houses in the town and neighbourhood; the by-laws are excellent and promptly executed; the inhabitants are orderly, peaceable and industrious. Within a mile of this place is Ballywilliam, the delightful residence of Lady Arbuckle; the building is in the cottage style, with suitable offices. Here is a good parish church, with a glebe-house occupied by the Rev. Mr. Boyd, besides a Presbyterian meeting house, an Independent and a Wesleyan chapel. The Independent chapel is a newly erected structure at the northern extremity of the town; it is comfortable and commodious. The present Presbyterian meeting house being badly situated, and in a ruinous condition, a new one is about to be erected in the centre of the town; it will be a very handsome and commodious place of worship, and the front will be supported by four lofty columns of the Doric order; its dimensions are eighty-four feet by forty-six. Here is a charity school, endowed by the late Countess of Mount Alexander, for the education, clothing and apprenticing out of thirty boys; the same lady gave 2*l.* per annum to the poor widows of the town and parish. The late Dr. Sempill also bequeathed 20*l.* annually to the poor of this parish, to be applied in clothing, &c. There are also Sunday schools, and a dispensary, where the poor are gratuitously supplied with medicine. The market is held on Wednesday, and there are five fairs in the year, viz: on the ninth of June, the 4th of July, the 16th of August, the 22nd of October, and the second Wednesday in December. The population is about 3,000.

POST OFFICE.—Post Master, Mr. Michael Smith. The Dublin and Belfast mail is despatched every morning at six, and arrives daily at twelve. Letters for England and Scotland are sent at one in the day, and arrive at ten in the morning, weather permitting.

DONEGAL,

IN the county of that name, is one hundred and fourteen miles north-west of Dublin, eleven north of Ballyshannon, thirteen south-west of Ballybofey, thirteen east of Killybegs, and agreeably situated on the river Esk, at the head of Donegal bay. Here are the ruins of a fine old castle, said to have been the residence of the king or chief of this country; it was erected about the thirteenth century, and, possessing the remains of fine architecture, deserves to be visited by the antiquarian. Contiguous to the town are also the ruins of an abbey, founded in the year 1474 by Odo Roe for Franciscan friars. At a short distance is a famous spa, said to possess all the qualities of the Harrowgate water. The town is well built and nearly triangular; previous to the union it was a borough, and sent members to the Irish parliament.

Donegal possesses one of the finest inns in the province, and, as no crannage or tolls are charged, it will, in all probability, soon have a good market. The market house is a convenient building, over which are held sessions for the recovery of debts, four times in the year. The parish church, which is small, was erected on the site of ground, on which the old abbey stood; and about a mile from the town is a Roman Catholic chapel. The market day is Saturday, and fairs are held on the last Wednesday in January and February, the 17th of March, the 8th of April, the 5th and 28th of May, the 9th of July, the 8th of August, the 4th and the 29th of September, the 28th of October, the 28th of November, and the last Wednesday in December. Population about 800.
