GILFORD

IS a small post and fair town on the eastern verge of the county of Down, 66 miles north of Dublin, 21 south south-west of Belfast, 4 north-west of Banbridge, 8 south-west of Dromore, 4 south of Warrenstown, 8 south by west of Moira, and 41 north of Newry. This place, which is the property of Sir William Johnston, Bart. is pleasantly situated on the river Banu, over which there is an excellent stone bridge of 22 arches. The surrounding country exceeds description, and may justly be called the garden of the north; it is famous for its bleach grounds, and the manufacture of linen. The church is a plain stone building, consisting of one aisle. Here are also chapels for Roman Catholics and Presbyterians. Fairs are held on the 21st of June, and the 21st of November.

POST OFFICE.—Post Master, Mr. Kennedy Cockran. The letters arrive at half-past eight every morning, and depart at half-past five in the evening.

HILLSBOROUGH

IS a small market town in the county of Down, agreeably seated on an eminence upon the mail road from Dublin to Belfast, 70 miles north of the former, and 10 miles south of the latter. It is neat and modern built, and possesses a very good market, principally for linen yarn. The public buildings here are very handsome, and give an air of respectability not usually possessed by a small town. The church is a very elegant building, consisting of a nave and cross aisles; the tower is 110 feet high, and the steeple 100, forming together a most beautiful piece of workmanship, which may be discerned at a considerable distance; there are also two smaller towers at the sides. The interior corresponds with the exterior, every window being adorned with stained glass; it has a good organ, and a monument by Noltekens to the memory of Archdeacon Leslie is well worthy of attention. The market and courthouse is a large stone building adorned with a clock and vane, and admirably calculated for the purposes of its erection. The other public buildings are the shambles, and two neat schools; but the meeting-houses are situated at some distance from the town. The charitable institutions are a dispensary, open every Wednesday and Saturday, and a school for children of both sexes, conducted on the modern system of education, founded by the Marquis and Marchioness of Downshire, supported by subscription, and attended by about 80 boys and 50 girls; Mr. Francis Ford is the master, and Mrs. Margaret Ford the mistress. There is also an extensive Sunday School patronised by the Marquis and Marchioness. In the adjoining parish of Annahilt is a school founded by Thomas Jameson, a merchant of Belfast, for the benefit of this his native parish; he liberally endowed it with 1000*l.* which are placed out at interest upon landed property, and the noble Marquis granted four acres of land, upon which the school house stands; 130 boys and 90 girls upon an average attend; Mr. Robert Forsyth is the master, and Mrs. Margaret Forsyth the mistress. Hillsborough contains the noble mansion of the Marquis of Downshire, to whose family this town gives the title of Earl; the Marquis is the proprietor of this place, and also possesses vast estates in the neighbourhood. This town was a borough before the union, and sent two members to the Irish parliament. Here is a small ancient castle, still kept in repair, of which the Marquis is governor. The quarter sessions are held here; the market-day is on Monday, and there are fairs on the third Wednesday in February, the third Wednesday in May, the third Wednesday in August, and the third Wednesday in November.—The population is about 1200.

POST OFFICE.—Post Master, Mr. Edward Conkey. The mail from Dublin arrives at eight in the morning, and leaves at half-past six in the evening. The mail from Belfast arrives every evening at half-past six, and departs every morning at eight.
