LOUGH BRICKLAND

IS a small post town in the county of Down, on the mail road from Dublin to Belfast, fifty-eight miles north of the former, and twenty-two south of the latter. It consists of one street of no great extent. The only public building here is the Church, which is small, but has a handsome spire lately erected; the Dissenting meeting houses, and the Roman Catholic chapel are at some distance. A very neat parish school a little way out of the town, where about 200 children of both sexes receive instruction, is supported by subscription. Fairs are held on the first Tue day in February, the 28th of March, the 10th of July, and the 12th of November.

POST OFFICE.—Post Master, Mr. John O'Flaherty. The mail from Dublin, &c, arrives every morning at half-past five, and departs every evening at twenty minutes past eight.

LURGAN,

IN the county of Armagh, is sixty-seven miles north-by-west of Dublin, seventeen south-west of Belfast, fourteen north-north-east of Armagh, seven north-by-east of Tanderagee, and five north-east of Portadown. It is a handsome, well built town, principally consisting of one wide street, which is well paved and remarkably clean. The church is a fine stone building, ornamented with a handsome spire, which gives it a dignified appearance; the interior is no less beautiful and has an excellent organ. The Catholics, Presbyterians, Quakers and Methodists have each a place of worship. The court-house is a handsome stone building near the church. A school, which has been established here, is supported by subscriptions and an annual charity sermon; it educates upwards of two hundred children. The patron of Lurgan is Charles Brownlow, esq, M. P., whose mansion and beautiful demense adjoin the town; the former is a very ancient building, which has received many alterations and additions; the latter, which is always open to the inhabitants, is ornamented with rich plantations and a fine sheet of water, which abounds with various species of water fowl, and is surrounded by a broad gravel walk. Lurgan is a thriving town, and is well situated for trade, being within two miles of Lough Neagh. It has two noted breweries, and an extensive distillery lately built by Messrs. Greer and Boyd. The market every Friday for cambrics, lawns, diapers, and damasks, is very considerable. The fairs are on the 3rd of August, and the 22nd of November.

POST OFFICE.—Post Mistress, Mrs. Ann Morriss. The Dublin mail arrives every morning at eight, and is despatched every evening at six. The mail from Belfast and Donaghadee arrives every evening at a quarter past eight, and is despatched at five every morning. The mail from Enniskillen arrives at midnight, and departs at a quarter past eight every evening.

MAGHERA

IS in the county of Derry, about 100 miles north by west of Dublin, 7 south west of Kilrea, 6 north north west of Magherafelt, 5 north west of Castle-Dawson, and 8 north by west of Meneymore. In 1820 a handsome stone church was erected, with a square steeple, and in the year following a school was built for the
